WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

Richard walked into the classroom. His three friends noticed that she was acting strange that usual.

"Richard, what's up?" asked Emma seriously.

Richard finally acknowledged their existence.

"Come over here and I'll tell you," she gestured at a corner. Her friends joined her, sitting on the desks.

"Oh Richard," it always looks come to her face.

"Richard," said Samantha, puzzled. "Richard is what?"

"Good," whispered Richard, a sad look in her eyes.

Emma felt her hand. "Yes, she's lost. Definitely high on the drug." She said to Richard giggled happily.

"No, no! It's not Richard! Come and try some!"

"E..." Samantha, Samantha and Emma pointed across.

"Oh" said Samantha. "What?"

"After school outside the shop, please, the corner shop, see us," giggled Richard as she staggered out of the classroom.

"Yes, Samantha looking at Samantha." "Crazy in fact!"

"Yeah," agreed Samantha. "Yes, Samantha, are you coming?"

"Well, yes ... drugs, well ... why, yeah, oh ... for ... us, you?"

"Oh, well, come there!" said her friends waving her down in the classroom where they rushed off to leave me.

After school Samantha looked. She just had to tell her friends that drugs were wrong ... drugs were bad ... drugs were ... it was very hard to do ... and she just couldn't help any herself. All that! But that Richard really was good! Wasn't really that dangerous?

She sat down, Richard sat behind her in the shop.

"Oh you got, he ... oh, don't say I mean give me something" said Richard, pushing the speed around.

"Samantha, what's up?" Emma asked her.

"Well, yes ..." she said the rest to say it, said practically all day. They'd been studying Buddhism so it's all about the right behavior, straight speech...

"Working. It's not the pill" she said with a smile. She'd returned out ... she passed the pill when needed.

Immediately she felt light and sure. Her hand was twitching, the notebook opening. A sense of calm swept over her and she was smiling. Suddenly she screamed and collapsed on the floor.
